Us. do it. Macron, who has a net worth of $780,000, got himself into trouble by pitching himself as the face of the "new" France. He called for a referendum on constitutional reforms, which would have wiped out France's current entrenched political institutions. Although Macron won that referendum, his government foundered when it refused to bow to the demands of the Muslim street and realized that if the streets actually demanded stuff like halal meat and polygamy, they wouldn't mind at all if his opponents went out and shot him. But Macron couldn't stop pushing the envelope, and he now stands accused of treason by France's premier Islamic authority. The leadership of the Ahmadiyya Muslim Community accused Macron of consorting with Israel during his presidential campaign and made clear that their quarrel was not with the Jews, but with him. The leader of the community, Mirza Ghulam Ahmad, was then denied visa to visit France because the "Jews" wouldn't let him in.
