Are You Scamming or Hackers! You might have heard about hackers or those who claim to be hackers. You may also have seen a stranger looking at pictures on your phone; chances are you or your friend has been scammed. "What is it?" This article will tell you exactly what kind of people scam you. Hackers vs Hackers Hackers are the people who hack other people's computer systems. For instance, if you use a simple password for your social media account, hackers may use tools to hack your email account and steal your private information. As soon as you sign up for a social media account, you have to agree to terms, and one of them is that if you share your personal information with others, you are giving them permission. You should never share your password or personal information with others on a social media. If you use a password manager such as LastPass, password reuse is a big risk for you. If your password manager is compromised, your passwords will be stolen and your personal data will be in jeopardy. Hackers vs Hackers Hackers vs Hackers Social media hacking or social engineering is a type of social network phishing where a hacker attempts to steal sensitive information from social media.

Some hackers do that by sending you a friend request, and when you accept it, they start flirting with you and sometimes even ask you for personal information. Or they can use your social media account to send a message to someone else, pretending to be you. Social media and email hacking has become prevalent due to the high demand for cyber criminals and hackers to gain access to information. A Host of Browsing Toolbars and Extensions If you spend a lot of time in front of your computer, it's a very good idea to get a reliable browser. Open a new tab, read a few articles and suddenly three different toolbars begin popping up. Additionally, you have to deal with dozens of shortcuts, which you can enable or disable from the web browser's settings. Browsers such as Mozilla Firefox, Google Chrome and Opera are equipped with different extensions and add-ons. Some of these allow you to fine-tune your browsing experience, for example, to display the search results you favor. However, if you are using Internet Explorer or Safari, there is a great chance that you have installed an unpleasant extension or a piece of malwares. What to do when you see annoying popup ads The leading cause of slow page load is probably ad-supported popups. This is the reason why we suggest you to turn off or remove ad blockers from your browser. However, many of them are still a pain because they slow down page load and even block a certain area of the screen. Popup blockers that you can use In this article we will be looking at some of the most popular free-of-charge programs that allow you to remove annoying popups. If you use any other ad-supported browser, we strongly suggest that you try these solutions. Remove popups with the browser's preferences Ad-supported web browsers such as Google Chrome, Mozilla Firefox, Internet Explorer, and Safari have a dedicated section to disable advertisements, which we call "Ads Settings" in the case of Google Chrome and Mozilla Firefox. To open the Ads Settings, simply type: chrome://settings/ into your browser's address bar and select "Ads". In Chrome, after clicking on "Settings", it's possible to disable an add-on, block websites or set a specific time for their visit. Moreover, this program allows you to customize ad filtering, apply search engines, and select which extension should be blocked. There are two methods to clean the list of extensions: • Log off and sign in again • Delete the add-ons from the browser's directory To delete the extensions from the browser's directory, open the "chrome://extensions" page in the URL bar and manually delete them. There are also additional features that you can use in Chrome's Ads settings as well
