What's New In?

You can now import the latest version of a template directly from the markups panel (Figure 1). By clicking the “template” button, you will be able to choose the latest version from the markers panel and “load it”.

In fact, as of Release 20, every template is versioned. As long as you have an internet connection, any template you mark up will be available at any time. And, since any version of the template is always available, you'll be able to make changes to it without ever having to redo the drawing.

Templates that you previously mark up become available as soon as you mark the drawing.

New templates are available by searching the “Markups Panel”

category. Markup assist is now available from any editing context, including the Drawing Markups tab. “Additional Data” panel: The “Additional Data” panel provides additional information such as geometry on a part, major dimensions, part quantity, cost, maximum, and so on. Use the display options on this panel to choose how you want to view it. The “Switch to style” option allows you to switch between the general and detailed style in the “Additional Data” panel (Figure 2). For example, you can display the dimensions of a part by using the “Additional Data” panel as a field as well as displaying the dimensions in a separate text box. There are many other display options in the “Additional Data” panel. See the Design & Data panel manual for a complete list of these options.

Relate Dimensions: Previously, when two dimensions were related by a constraint, only the first dimension was automatically updated when the “Constrained Change” dialog was activated. This update was based on the first dimension because it was the one that had been selected in the dialog. Now, when two dimensions are related by a constraint, both dimensions are updated. You can control whether the first or both dimensions are updated. See the “Constraint Settings” page of the Design & Data panel manual for more information. AutoLISP:

AutoLISP is a tool for applying functions to a selected block or region. It provides the ability to apply a function to each block or region in a drawing. You can also apply a function to each feature, region, or path in the drawing.
