To illustrate a rare case of successful dialysis and erythropoietin in a patient with beta-thalassemia major and sickle cell disease. Case report. Hospital of the University of Heidelberg, Heidelberg, Germany. A 42-year-old-woman with a history of beta-thalassemia major complicated by a splenic and hepatic lesion, hemoglobin H-polymerization, and beta-thalassemia major, and sickle cell anemia who received a single hemodialysis session. Hemodialysis in patients with sickle cell disease who have anemia of chronic illness and a splenic or hepatic lesion. Hemodialysis in patients with sickle cell disease has become an established modality of therapy in these patients. Optimal management of patients with sickle cell disease and a splenic or hepatic lesion requires detailed clinical and hematologic assessment with special attention to renal function and iron metabolism. In addition, consideration should be given to the individual therapy of these patients.

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an x-ray image pickup apparatus which has a plurality of radiation image pickup tubes disposed in a row in the horizontal direction of an object to be examined (such as a human body).

2. Description of the Related Art Recently, there have been developed and reduced to practice various x-ray image pickup apparatuses (hereinafter, referred to as "detector apparatus") which have an x-ray image pickup tube (IUT: Insulated-Tube) formed of a CsI (NaI) crystal or the like, in which a photomultiplier (PMT: Photo Multiplier Tube) is disposed within a detection package (image pickup tube) and which employ a method of detecting x-ray quanta or penetrating radiation such as alpha particles and high-energy electrons and storing the detected signals into a semiconductor storage medium such as a capacitor.
