A if its one of the 1st places you look, it might be a good idea. Having a towing manual is good for other reasons. The 1st one is that it has codes for how the trim fits into the towbar. You can swap the trim when you get it. That is what most towbar codes are. The 2nd one is that most towing systems have a disconnect that allows you to detach the tow bar without detaching the towball or hitches. I have a few systems that have this on the trailer. You can attach the towball in a factory automatic way so you do not have to do it yourself, but if you have to do it yourself
